State of the State Priorities

Last week, Governor John Carney delivered his 2023 State of the State address where he outlined several key priorities and initiatives that will keep Delaware moving forward. From advancements in education to growing our workforce and creating a healthier Delaware, we have a lot of exciting work ahead. I recently sat down with 47 ABC to talk about my work with Governor Carney to advance those priorities over the next two years.

Tackling Climate Change in Delaware

As the lowest-lying state in the country, climate change is one of the greatest threats facing Delaware. I recently joined Senator Tom Carper, Congresswoman Lisa Blunt Rochester along with state, local, & county officials to celebrate the passage of The Water Resources Development Act of 2022 (WRDA).

The bill will help us protect Delaware's beaches and shorelines from climate change, support academic research, invest in municipal infrastructure, and prioritize disadvantaged communities.

As always, thank you to our federal delegation for always fighting for our state and its precious resources.

Happy Lunar New Year!

Over the weekend, I joined my friends from the Chinese American Community Center (CACC) in Hockessin to celebrate the start of the Chinese Lunar New Year.

This year is the Year of the Rabbit. In China, the rabbit symbolized peace, mercy, and good luck. I wish everyone good luck and good health throughout the coming year. Happy New Year!
